Workshop Open Science – a general introduction

Open access and FAIR (Findable, Accessible, Interoperable and Reusable) data are now common terms in all fields of research. And both are crucial in the transition to open science, but open science is much more than that. Open science can be applied throughout the entire research workflow in many ways. We will discuss and explore these and other aspects during an interactive workshop. You will explore ways to incorporate open science in your daily routine, find out what aspects in the work of your research group are already open, and what barriers and motivations you encounter.

Presenters: Felix Weijdemans and Najoua Ryane, Librarians (Utrecht University Library)
